

Summer School in history and sociology of sport Paris, 2020

International Summer School for Young Researchers – Course for PhD Students.

Date: 22nd of June – 26th of June, 2020

Place: Department of Sports Sciences, Université Gustave Eiffel, Paris, France

Gathering the initiatives of the universities of Copenhagen, Paris and Lausanne, the 2020 summer school is the first edition of a new session supported by five universities and two learned societies in sports history.

Aims and topic

The Summer School 2020 is dedicated to young researchers in history and sociology whose work on subjects linked to physical activity and sport. These subjects cover a broad area, which allows experts and students to share experiences.

The Summer School provides a space to share information on research, theories and methods as well as to exchange ideas and knowledge about current tendencies and “hot issues” in the multiple arenas of physical activities and sports.

The Summer School will provide a forum, which enables communication, networks and cooperation among the participants, students as well as invited scholars.

The course is addressed to PhD students and young researchers and intends to support them in their scientific work. It offers students the opportunity of acquiring new knowledge, of presenting their research, of discussing problems, of obtaining advices from experts and of building up professional networks. It is intended to help young researchers to become integrated into the scientific community.

Organisation

In keynote lectures, experts will address important questions, new approaches, problems and strategies of research, current trends and major issues in the area of sport ideologies, policies and practices. They will also be available for discussions and individual supervision.

All students will have the opportunity to present their own projects and get feedback from experts and other students. Papers with the main outlines of these projects must be submitted in advance and will be accessible for participants.

Certification

A certificate of attendance will be delivered to each participant.
